Reviews

“Sublime construction... powerful and engrossing...Oversight is not merely a cautionary tale or an engaging political thriller. It's a deeper contemplation of the philosophical constructs of cognitive science, morality, and advanced epistemology.”

— BRIAN PAUL SCIPIONE, CTX LIVE THEATRE

“Philosophical, political, deeply human and unnervingly timely...an ambitious and provocative and well written work that lingers long after the curtain falls.”

— ELISE KRENTZEL, SUN NEWS AUSTIN

“Ambitious... unsettling... maintains a brisk pace... relevant... fascinating... timely... introduces an extraordinary range of ideas... increasingly urgent... thought-provoking... a steadily escalating political thriller.”

— SABRINA WALLACE, BROADWAYWORLD AUSTIN

“Inspired writing... subtle brilliance... thoroughly reflects our current conflicted, fraught, violent, mysterious, and confusing social reality... Expectations soared for Oversight, and the audiences crowding Hyde Park Theatre have not been disappointed.”

— DAVID GLEN ROBINSON, CTX LIVE THEATRE

“Tense, bleak, and thrilling, it's a premium theatrical bottle episode.”

— CAT MCCARREY, THE AUSTIN CHRONICLE

“LB Deyo's vigorous, meaty dialogue weaves a plot of intrigue, deception, and a catastrophe...Oversight will make you think.”

— MICHAEL MEIGS, CTX LIVE THEATRE

Synopsis

Oversight is a fast-paced political thriller set during a secret emergency session of a special Congressional-Executive committee assembled under false pretenses. The public cover story concerns hypersonic weapons. The real subject is classified at the highest possible level.

As military officials, politicians, intelligence figures, and corporate representatives attempt to assess an emerging technological threat, the meeting spirals into paranoia, philosophical conflict, political maneuvering, and existential dread.

The deeper the committee digs, the less certain anyone becomes about who is telling the truth, what is really happening beyond the walls of the hearing room, and whether the crisis is already beyond human control.

Full synopsis

Oversight unfolds in real time inside Room 106 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building during a closed-door emergency meeting of a special oversight committee. Phones have been confiscated. Secure communications are monitored. A stenographer records every word.

Senior OpenBrain scientist Cassandra “Cass” Ogden and Chief Scientist Kareem Najah reveal fragments of a rapidly evolving situation whose implications appear to extend far beyond conventional military or technological competition.

As the hearing progresses, political alliances fracture. Military leaders demand containment. Others argue that hesitation could hand strategic dominance to hostile foreign powers.

The committee has been assembled under a false public cover concerning hypersonic weapons development. In reality, representatives from the private technology company OpenBrain have requested an emergency briefing regarding a classified breakthrough with potentially catastrophic geopolitical consequences.

What begins as a policy meeting becomes something stranger and more frightening: a confrontation with the limits of political authority, human understanding, and institutional trust.

THE QUESTIONS ON THE TABLE

Can rapidly accelerating technologies remain under meaningful human control?

What happens when governments become dependent upon systems they barely understand?

Is secrecy protecting the public, or merely delaying panic?

How do political institutions respond to threats unlike anything in human history?

Themes

POWER AND SECRECY

Oversight explores the hidden relationships between governments, corporations, military institutions, and emerging technologies.

HUMAN AGENCY

At its core, Oversight asks whether human beings and political institutions can maintain meaningful control during moments of rapid technological and historical acceleration.

TRUTH AND MANIPULATION

The play examines institutional distrust, strategic deception, media fragmentation, and the destabilization of shared reality.

FEAR AND UNCERTAINTY

Like many political thrillers, Oversight is deeply concerned with paranoia, uncertainty, competing narratives, and the psychological effects of living inside systems too vast to fully comprehend.
